I stayed in London and Oxford to take part in Congo Research Network 2018. It was held in St Antony’s Collage, University of Oxford. My supervisor, Dr. Kimura, and me also my colleagues had an oral presentation in the conference.

Before I went to Oxford, I stayed in London for 2 days, so I visited the library of SOAS University of London to collect some references about legends in DR Congo. SOAS is university that is specialized in area studies, same as ASAFAS, Kyoto university. I was very surprised that quantity of references. Some countries (ex: Cameroon, South Africa etc...) are assigned to 20-30 selves. I also startled students. Even though I visited the library in the morning, so many students are studying there. Through these attitude prompted my motivation of my study. It was good opportunity to visit UK, because I got new connection with other Congo researchers and I also got new information about eastern Congo. I could feel the study willingness and motivation from staying in UK.
